New regulatory impacts and updates

The importance of complying with the new requirements

Due to federal regulations all advertisements featuring a financing promotion or a monthly payment must comply with the requirements detailed in this guide.

The new requirements were established to help consumers better understand the credit costs and terms they accept when they choose to utilize financing. The new requirements apply to consumer-facing advertisements.

Major impacts to advertisements that feature financing promotions

Any advertisement that features a no-interest option or a no interest promotion now must have additional language in the header and subhead of the advertisement. Language promoting the absence of certain fees or charges, such as “no annual fees,” “no pre-payment penalties” or “no interest” now trigger a requirement for additional disclosures as well.

In addition, the term “fixed” and similar terms are now prohibited when referring to Annual Percentage Rates (APRs) in connection with one of our programs.

These impacts are effective Thursday, July 1, 2010, for all consumer advertisements that feature financing. Please update all existing advertisements to comply with these new requirements by the effective date.

Your options for general financing mentions

Advertising a specific financing promotion can help generate a stronger response, but if space and time are limited, you can refer to financing in a more general way that does not require a disclosure. Consider using one of the mentions below:

- Apply for credit today
- Apply for financing today
- Apply for your XYZ card today
- Ask about financing
- Ask about our financing options
- Ask about our flexible financing options
- Ask about our special financing promotions
- Buy now, pay later
- Buy now, pay over time
- Buy more with financing
- Buy more with financing—ask us how
- Don't want to pay with cash?
- Financing available
- Flexible financing available
- Flexible payment options available
- Increase your buying power today
- Increase your buying power with financing
- Increase your purchasing power with reduced rate financing

Terms to be familiar with as you read this guide

Header	The most prominent language in the advertisement, where the financing promotion and/or monthly payment is emphasized.
Subhead	Additional language that is required within the advertisement, immediately next to or beneath the header and, depending on the promotion, may need to be in the same type size as the header.
Footnote disclosure	Language that details credit cost and term information of the product(s) featured in the advertisement. When a footnote disclosure is required, this language must be clear and conspicuous, but can usually be featured less prominently than the advertising header. Reference the Advertising Disclosure document for your program when developing your advertisements.
Trigger terms	Words or phrases that prompt additional disclosure language in the header, subhead and/or footnote disclosure of the advertisement to clarify the credit costs and terms that are being promoted. Trigger terms to be aware of when promoting financing are terms that reference: <ul style="list-style-type: none"><li>• the circumstances under which a finance charge may be imposed;</li><li>• the amount of a finance charge;</li><li>• an explanation of how a finance charge is determined;</li><li>• when a finance charge begins to accrue; and/or</li><li>• whether or not any time period exists when the credit extended may be repaid without incurring a finance charge.</li></ul>
Advertising Disclosure document:	Your program-specific document that details the language necessary when advertising your credit card program. You can locate the Advertising Disclosure document under the “Advertising Resources” tab on the left navigation bar of the Online Resource Center at wffrs.com or from your Wells Fargo Financial Retail Services representative. This guide should be used in conjunction with your program’s Advertising Disclosures.

Print and point-of-sale advertisements

The requirements below will help you develop your print and point-of-sale advertising. These types of advertisements include, but aren't limited to, the following:

- Brochures and pamphlets
- Direct mail campaigns
- In-store signage (i.e., posters, hang tags, static stickers, countertop mats, application holders)
- Newspaper advertisements
- Single-page flyers
- Statement inserts
- Statement messaging

Requirements for advertising no-interest option promotions

These requirements apply to print and point-of-sale advertisements that offer a no-interest option promotion.

Header and all other mentions of the no-interest promotion You must include the phrase “if paid in full” prior to the length of the financing promotion in the header and all other subsequent mentions of the no-interest option promotion. Both the phrase “if paid in full” and the length of the financing promotion must be in the same type size as the phrase “no interest” or similar term.

Examples:

- No interest if paid in full within 12 months
- No interest if paid in full by March 1, 2012
- [Custom/equal/regular] payments with no interest financing if paid in full within 18 months

Please note: it is no longer possible to only advertise “No-interest option financing available,” because it does not disclose the length of the financing promotion.

Subhead The language below must be clear and conspicuous and included immediately next to or below the header:

- Interest will be charged to your account from the purchase date if the purchase balance is not paid in full within the promotional period or if you make a late payment.*

Please note: the subhead is only required after the header (the most prominent mention of the no-interest promotion). All subsequent mentions of the no-interest promotion do not require the subhead.

*Footnote disclosure The financing promotion featured in the header will trigger the required footnote disclosure that explains the credit costs and terms to the consumer. Please reference the Advertising Disclosure document provided by Wells Fargo Financial Retail Services for the most current disclosure language. Your footnote disclosure must be clear and conspicuous and printed in at least 8-point font.

*Footnote disclosure

No-interest option promotion, point-of-sale

Requirements for advertising reduced rate promotions

These requirements apply to print and point-of-sale advertisements that offer a reduced rate promotion.

Header A reduced rate promotion applies until the qualifying purchase is paid in full, therefore no additional language is required in the header of the advertisement.

Example:

- Reduced rate of 9.9% with custom payments*
- 9.9% reduced rate*

Subhead No subhead language is required.

*Footnote disclosure The financing promotion featured in the header will trigger the required footnote disclosure that explains the credit costs and terms to the consumer. Please reference the Advertising Disclosure document provided by Wells Fargo Financial Retail Services for the most current disclosure language. Your footnote disclosure must be clear and conspicuous and printed in at least 8-point font.

Reduced rate promotion, print ad

*Footnote disclosure The monthly payment (and, if applicable, the financing promotion) featured in the header will trigger the required footnote disclosure that explains the credit costs and terms to the consumer. Please reference the Advertising Disclosure document provided by Wells Fargo Financial Retail Services for the most current disclosure language. Your footnote disclosure must be clear and conspicuous and printed in at least 8-point font.

- On-air radio sponsorships (i.e., traffic report)
  - Radio advertisements
  - Television advertisements

Requirements for broadcast advertisements

If you want to promote financing in your television and radio advertisements, we recommend utilizing the general financing language we highlight on page 3 for these advertising mediums due to the limited time and space requirements.

However, if you would like to feature a specific financing promotion or a monthly payment in your broadcast advertisement, it is required that the advertisement features:

- The required header, subhead and footnote disclosure for the specific promotion. Please reference the print and point-of-sale requirements (pages 5-7) for how to feature each mention of the financing promotion or monthly payment in the broadcast

Or

- The required header and subhead for the specific promotion with a shorter footnote disclosure that includes a reference to the variable APR and the APR(s) associated with the promotion. In addition, a reference must be made during the broadcast advertisement that consumers can call a toll-free number for additional information about credit costs and terms. Please reference the print and point-of-sale requirements (pages 5-7) for how to feature each mention of the financing promotion or monthly payment in the broadcast advertisement and examples on page 14 for how the toll-free number should be featured.

Please note: you must manage the toll-free number and the message that details the credit costs and terms must be featured early in your automated message to the consumer.

Television advertisements:

The type-size requirements for the header and subhead detailed in the "Print and point-of-sale" guidelines (see pages 5-7) should be followed for television advertisements. Please reference the Advertising Disclosure document provided by Wells Fargo Financial Retail Services for the most current disclosure language. All disclosures should be clear and conspicuous.

Radio advertisements:

The header and subhead must be read at the same speed as all other copy within the advertisement. Only the footnote disclosure may be read at a slightly quicker pace, but still must be understandable.
